Problem Statement

Now that we're living in a digital age, internet safety is at the forefront of every parent's mind. Times have changed and children are accessing the online world at a much younger age, with the majority of children starting to use the internet at three years old on average. However, finding the most engaging way to educate little ones on responsible internet usage can be difficult for parents. After all, children in their early development years aren't going to benefit from a serious discussion around the subject.

Solution

The Adventure of Chimamanda and Yusuf is the book parents and educators need to start having those difficult conversations with kids below 9 years when they received their first phone, laptop, or tablet. We can't always protect our kids from the things they see online, but we can educate them!

Yusuf and Amanda are excited to explore the exciting world of the Internet! But with every adventure comes challenges. Their Mom, Amina will be their guide as they navigate the online landscape. Amina will do her best to educate Yusuf and Amanda on Internet safety, but will they be able to overcome the obstacles along the way?
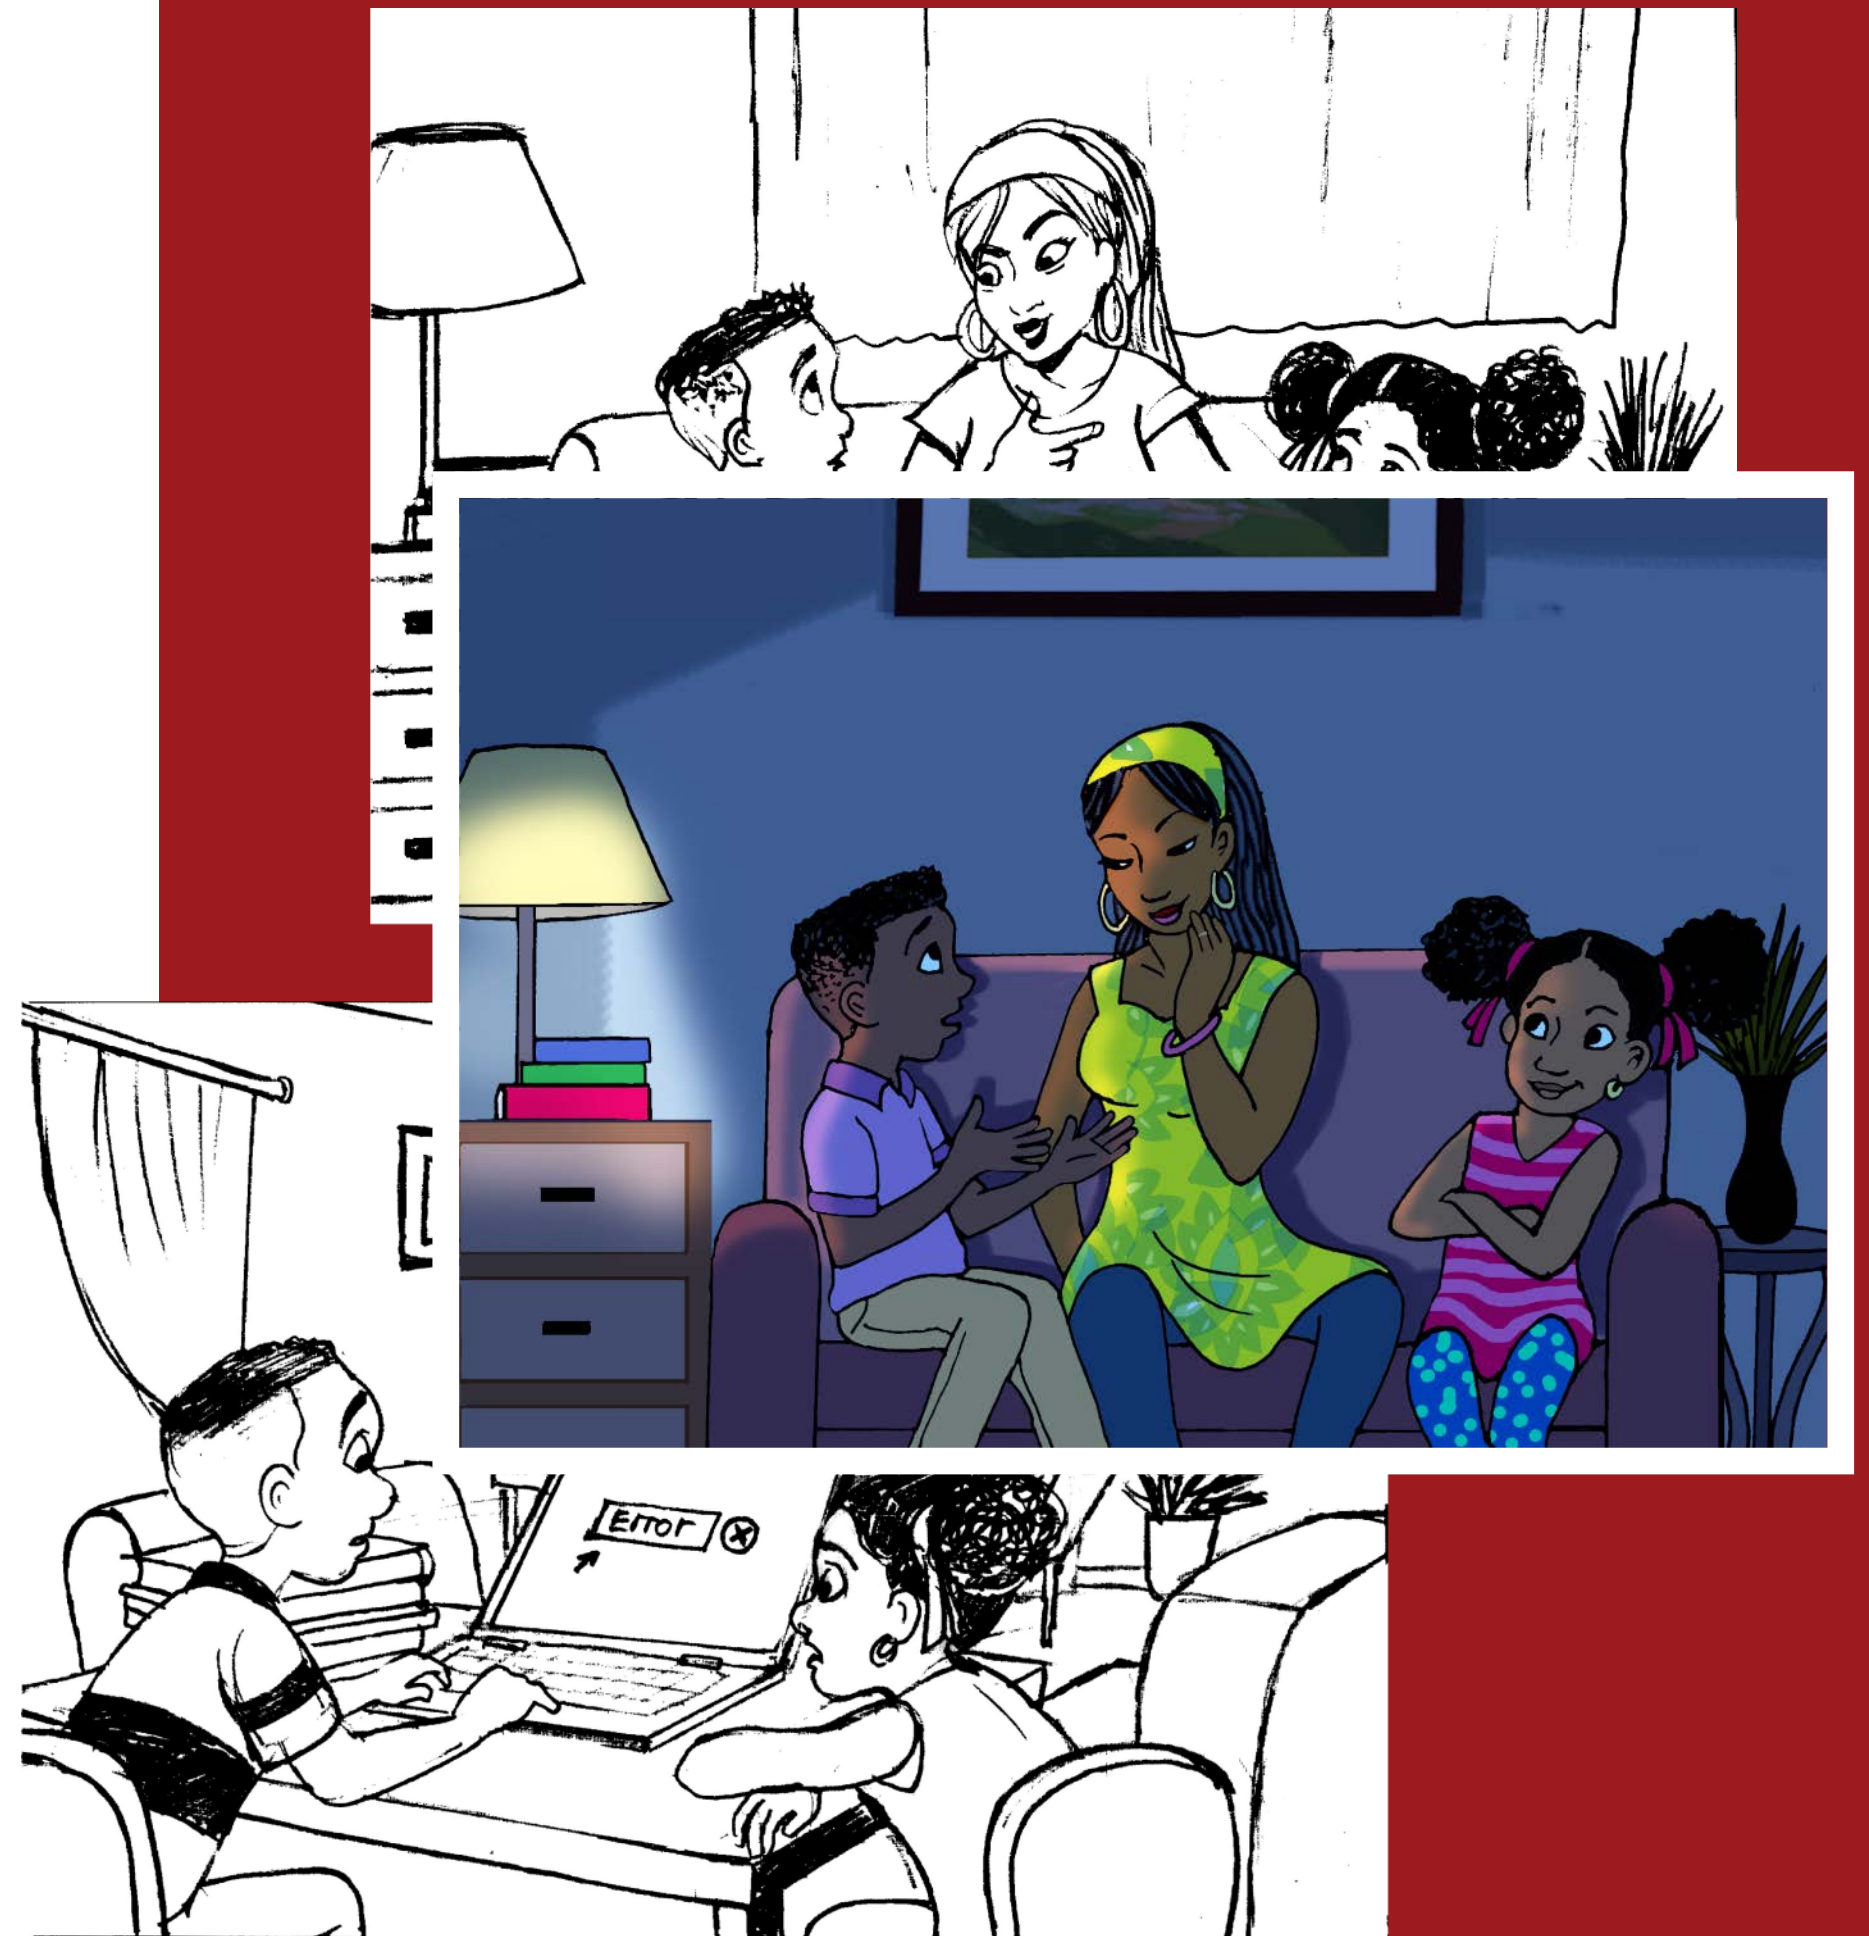

Discover their journey in this book.

Using real-world examples set within the context of a child, two siblings Chimamanda and Yusuf explore the internet guided by their mom, Amina. The book takes kids through several common scenarios around online safety, responsibility and parental supervision

The Adventure of Chimamanda and Yusuf addresses common safety concerns in a child-centered way and offers easy-to-understand rationales for why it's important to be safe and maintain boundaries online just as in real life.
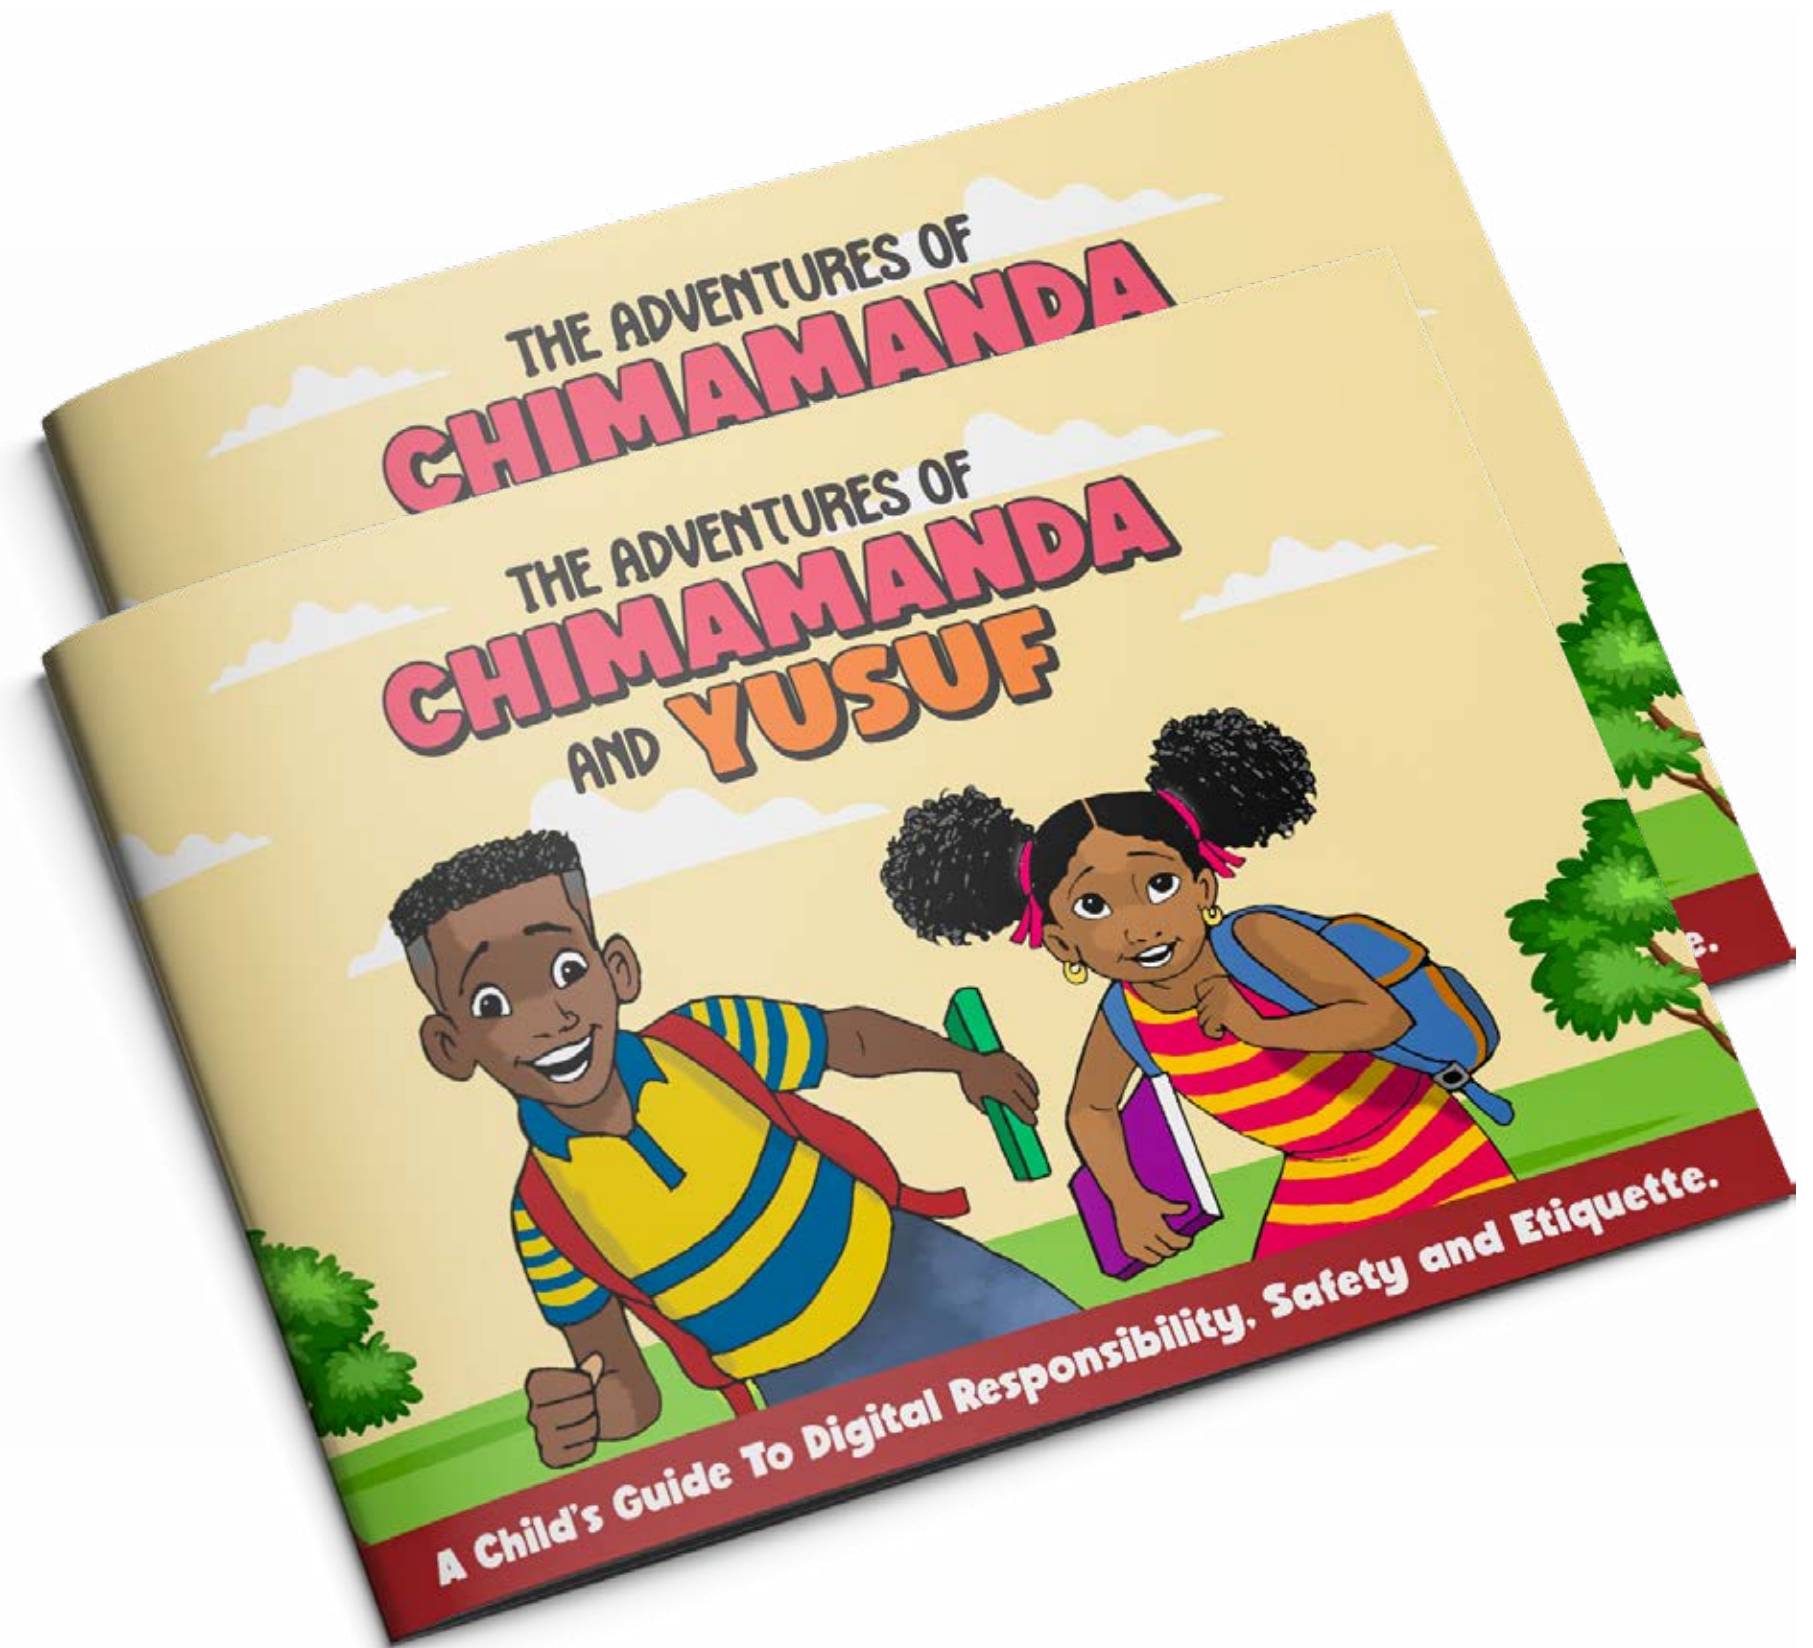

With its delightful illustrations, engaging storyline, and relatable characters, this book is an essential guide, lesson, and conversation starter for parents, teachers, counselors, and educators to teach online safety.
